Using Design Thinking Principles in Designing Your Life

Adapted from Design Thinking process (Stanford Life Design Lab)

Workview

A Workview should address the critical issues related to what work is and what it means to you.

It is not just a list of what you want from or out of work, but a general statement of your view of work.

A Workview may address such questions as:

- Why work?
- What's work for?
- What defines good or worthwhile work?
- What does money have to do with it ? – Does work need to pay well?
- How important is your experience, fulfilment and personal growth while working?

Lifeview

Your Lifeview is what provides your definition of what matters most to you.

- Why are we here?
- What is the meaning or purpose of life?
- What is the relationship between you and others?
- Where do family, country, and the rest of the world fit in?
- What is good, and what is evil?
- Is there a higher power, God, or something transcendent, and if so, what impact does this have on your life?
- What is the role of joy, sorrow, justice, injustice, love, peace, and strife in life?

Achieving Coherence

Read over your Workview and Lifeview statements.

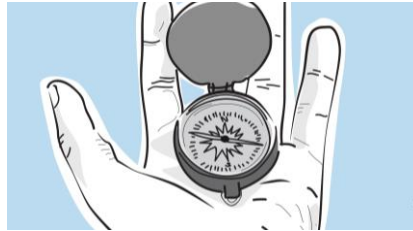

Is there a contradiction?

By having your Workview and Lifeview in alignment, you will be able to achieve clarity and live a coherent life.

The Future of Medical Services

Venturing into the unknown is starting to pay off for Serene Cai (CS'15), co-founder of healthcare startup Speedoc, as she sees her business grow and develop.

BY SIOBHAN TAN

Cai works with a team of dedicated individuals who strive to make healthcare more accessible. They have to be ready round the clock to answer phone calls from patients or family members, and respond promptly to emergency cases.

For their house visits, Speedoc's doctors bring along a medical kit consisting of essential drugs and supplies to treat patients. PHOTO: CALEB LAU

3

Consider -

- How coherent is each life with your Workviews and Lifeviews?
- How much you like each potential life?
- Available resources to make the ideas real? (time, money, skills, contacts)
- How confident are you about pulling this off?

Prepare 3 versions of your life using the template for the next tutorial as best you can. Some time will be given for you in the next tutorial but those who need more time could ideally do this for homework. Also bring a few coloured pens to Tutorial 3.

Draw out your Odyssey journey. Include at least one personal and professional milestone each year. We invite you to consider work, play, love and health as you imagine your possible future.
